Cookies

Cookies are usually small text files that are stored on your computer hard disk when you visit a website. The file usually contains the name of the server the cookie was sent from, the lifetime of the cookie, and a value (usually a randomly generated unique ID number). The website stores a corresponding file (with the same ID tag) to the one it sent to your browser. The website server which sent the cookie uses this number to recognize you when you return to a site e.g. it helps you resume where you left off.

When you access our site for the first time, you are asked to accept useful cookies.

There are two types of browser cookie: session cookies and persistent cookies. Session cookies are created temporarily in your browser's subfolder while you are visiting a website. Once you leave the site, the session cookie is deleted. Files for a permanent cookie remain in your browser's subfolder and are activated again once you visit the website that created that particular cookie. A permanent cookie remains in the browser's subfolder for the duration period set within the cookie's file.

Disabling Cookies: Users can disable or delete cookies in their browser. For example, in Chrome go to "Customize and Control (page top right), history, clear browsing data, tick cookies box, clear".

First and Third Party Cookies: First party (or local) cookies are cookies that are set by the site itself and can only be read by this site. They are commonly used for the functionality of the site e.g. site statistics. Third party cookies are set by third parties which can be tracking or marketing companies e.g. YouTube. This site collects a few (time-limited) first party and third party cookies. Check this out at Cookie Checker.
